

Paid Courses With Different Subscription Options

Let's say you have an ongoing course with topics, resources and content. You may want to provide your students with access to this course for some limited amount of time. For instance you may want to provide a subscription term of 1 day, 1 week, 2 weeks and 1 month. Each option would be priced separately.

This guide explains how to create paid course and configure different pricing options depending on the subscription term.

Create Your Paid Course

The first thing to do is to create your paid course as you normally do with all paid courses. The steps are outlined here: <http://support.e-lecta.com/Knowledgebase/Article/50009>

Once you reach the payment options you will be able to specify what subscription terms this course offers, as shown below.

To disable the "Entire Course Term" enrollment option leave the field "Course Price" empty or 0.00.

When your students register for this course they will be provided a list of options to choose from - each option with the price as configured above.

The image shows two side-by-side screenshots of a course registration interface, connected by a green arrow pointing from left to right. The left screenshot displays a list of subscription options with their respective prices and start dates. At the bottom of this list is a green button labeled "Register For This Course". The right screenshot shows the same list of options, but with radio buttons next to each option. The "For 2 Week(s)" option is selected, indicated by a filled radio button. Below the list, there are input fields for "First Name" and "Last Name".
